THEY DRAW FOR US

No. 6—Ted Brown

Although his abilities as a cartoonist were developed in Chicago and New York, Ted Brown knows Alaska better than any of the other artists who contribute regularly to The Seattle Times. A native of Minnesota, Ted Brown joined the gold rush to Alaska in 1898 while only a youth. He spent the next three years knocking around mining camps of the North.

He returned to Minneapolis with no gold, but with a valuable knowledge of human nature and with a determination to make a living with lighter tools than pick and shovel. From an apprenticeship in an art shop in St. Louis, Brown soon graduated to commercial drawing and eventually broke into the newspaper field with The Chicago Daily News. He remained with The News twenty years. For the last fifteen years he has been a member of the art staff of The New York Herald Tribune.

Ted Brown's editorial cartoons appear regularly in The Seattle Times.

A TINY NOTCH SAVES TONS!

On America's largest newspaper, even the smallest savings have been put into operation to reduce newsprint consumption.

For example, perhaps you wouldn't think that the few lines a day we used to devote to comic heads is very important. But in the newsprint crisis these lines loomed large.

By notching the daily comics, we saved 150 lines per day—which in the course of a year equals 296 tons.

Such parsimonious printing of our editorial matter has been necessitated by the need for more newsprint to meet the growing public demand for The News. We have done nothing in more than a year to stimulate circulation growth. We have run no contests, done no circulation advertising. And we raised the price of the Sunday News to 10¢ in 35 states and Canada. But the public continues to demand The News in greater numbers! Our Daily News circulation in August set an all-time high in News history. Sunday News circulation reached August of 1942 [illegible] copies, and August 1943 to 3,900,000 copies—despite curtailed distribution to more than 400,000 copies.

Before the war The News led all morning newspapers in America in total advertising in spite of our inability to get newsprint and a shortage of News Lines. The News in 1943 is still publishing more total advertising than any morning newspaper in America.

With public demand for our product at a peak, we point with pride to our newsprint saving record. Nothing of comic book size but one instance of savings. We have made thousands of other savings, both small and large. We have observed both the spirit and the letter of the war newsprint curtailment order.

The newsprint-saving record of The News is among the best of all American newspapers—and the mounting public demand for The News on top of years of phenomenal growth is without parallel in the history of the press!

Highest Daily Circulation in News History!

Average net paid August circulation exceeded 2,050,000 Daily... 3,900,000 Sunday

THEY MADE THE HEADLINES

In 1816, when Dorothea was fifteen, she arrived in Worcester from her home in Boston. Here for some time, she conducted a private school.

After visiting in 1823, the jail at East Cambridge, Mass., Miss Dix found the insane being treated as criminals. She wrote many articles in condemnation.

She next approached the Mass. Legislature and was influential in procuring an appropriation for asylums. With the aid of John Quincy Adams, she secured a bill providing for the Washington insane. From June, 1844, until August 1847, Miss Dix travelled 32,470 miles in her crusade to help the insane. She was equally well known in Europe and with the help of Pope Pius IX, established a new hospital in Rome.

Dorothea Linde DIX

Author, teacher, nurse. Famous as the founder of our present method of treating the insane. Born April 4, 1802, in Hampden, Maine. Died July 17, 1887 in Trenton, N.J. During the Civil War, she served without pay as Superintendent of Women Nurses in General Hospitals.

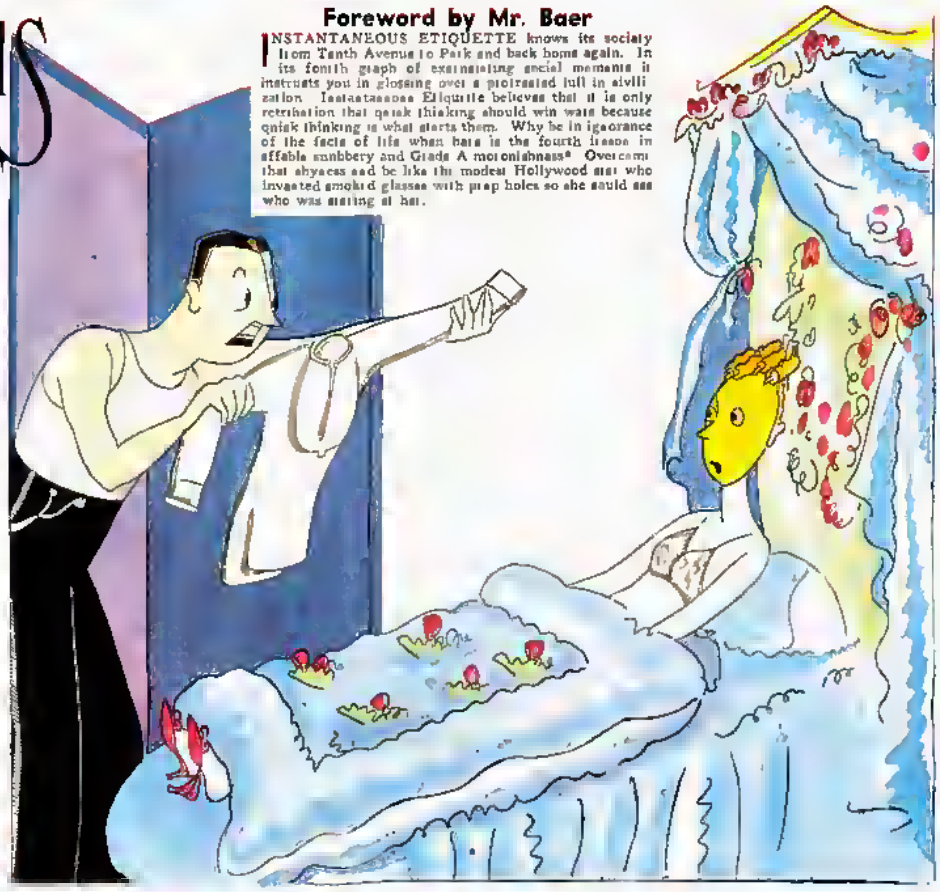
Instantaneous Etiquette

Presented in Pictures by—FISH, Brilliant English Satirist.

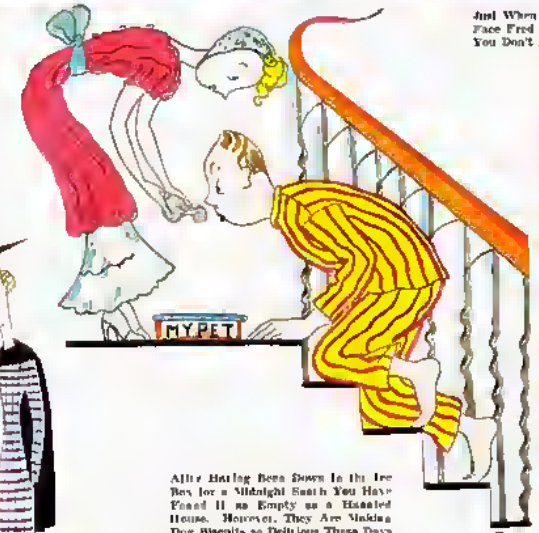
Answered by—Mr. Arthur "Bugs" Baer, Our Own Arbiter of Unusual Social Problems

Foreword by Mr. Baer

INSTANTANEOUS ETIQUETTE knows its society from Tenth Avenue to Park and back home again. In its fourth graph of examining social moments it instructs you in glossing over a protracted lull in civilization. Instantaneous Etiquette believes that it is only retribution that quick thinking should win wars because quick thinking is what starts them. Why be in ignorance of the facts of life when hara is the fourth lease in affable snubbery and Grade A moronishness? Overcome that shyness and be like the modest Hollywood star who invested smoked glasses with prop holes so she could see who was staring at her.

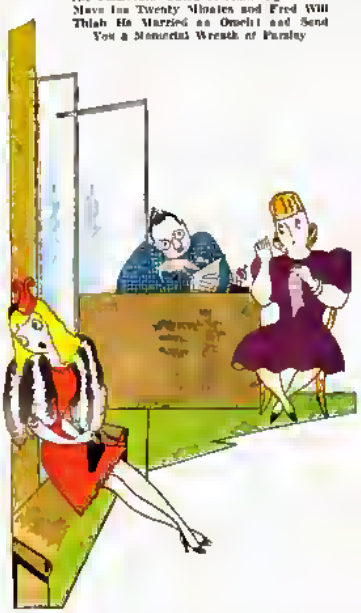


Your Girl Friend Has Just Given You a Box of Soap for Your Birthday. It's the Same Present You Gave Her for Christmas When You Said You Had Something Nice for Her Neck. Would You Say the Engagement Was Broken? Well, Try It Again Next Christmas and If You Get It Back Dear Mare We Would Say the Little Miss Was in Earnest.



Just When You Have Your Egg Pack All Stuccoed Neatly on Your Face Fred Wants to Know What Became of His Shirt Studs When You Don't Even Know What Became of Your Face. You Have One of Those Complaisant You Have to Join the Phantasy Union to Make Up. Don't Move for Twenty Minutes and Fred Will Think He Married an Orchid and Send You a Memorial Wreath of Parsley

You Have Been the Brightest Girl in the Sophomore Class for the Last Eleven Years. But You Hate Every Fraternity Pin Including the Dolphin Glamazon. You Have Just Been Spotted by Four Numbers on a Blind Date When You Should Be in Your Dorm Studying. Should You Worry About Repeating in the Handsome Dean? No. That's Just Another Date.



After Having Been Down in the Ice Box for a Midnight Snack You Have Found It so Empty as a Haunted House. However, They Are Making Dog Biscuits so Delicious These Days You Cannot Resist the Aroma. Shall You Share It With Your Wife? Certainly. Give Her First Bite and If She Doesn't Bark at Strangers You Take the Rest.

When Your Husband Is Late at the Office and His Flapper Stenographer Is Just as Late You Can Always Make It a Jolly Threesome by Knitting One of Those Afghans for a Chaise Longue at a Two-Car Garage. An Afghan Has No Territorial Limits and Lends Itself Readily to Being Knitted Late at the Office. You Can Hold It Down in a Hot Plain Pad or Enlarge It in a Hose Blanket With Four Sleeves. ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S QUESTION

WHAT BIBLE CHARACTER REFERRED TO HIS WIFE AS A HEIFER?

Samson

See 14th Chap. Judges.

UPON FOREIGN POLICY

KING SOLOMON ALWAYS SHOWED A DESIRE TO STRENGTHEN HIS THRONE BY FOREIGN ALLIANCES.

THE FATE OF A GREAT NATION ONCE HUNG UPON A FLEECE OF WOOL!

BEFORE GIDEON STARTED HIS VENTURE TO SAVE ISRAEL HE WANTED THE ASSURANCE OF A SIGN FROM GOD, AND USED AS A TEST A FLEECE OF WOOL ASKING THAT THE DEW FALL UPON THIS ONLY AND THAT "IT BE DRY UPON ALL THE EARTH OUTSIDE." TO MAKE DOUBLY SURE THIS MIRACLE WAS FOLLOWED BY A REVERSAL OF THE TEST THE NEXT NIGHT.

In Cuba, One Always Sees, Says Senor Xavier Cugat, the "Guy From Arkansas" Who Is Undecided What "Maracas" (Shakers) He Should Buy for His Girl Friend.

When the Market Square Goes Fiesta, Senor Cugat Caricatures the "Cumbachero" Type, the Shaking Lady in the Foreground, Who Has Only to Hear the Rhythm Beat to Go Into a Rumba on the Spot. On the Sidelines Watch the Moneyed Shoppers and the Colorful Vendors of Fruit and Tropical Delicacies.

HOW THEY DANCE 'EM WHERE THEY CAME FROM

CUBA

SENOR XAVIER CUGAT, the noted interpreter of Latin-American rhythms, takes us on a dancing tour of the picturesque Island of Cuba, home of the rumba, the conga, and many other dances which are so popular now.

As you can see from the drawings on this page, Senor Cugat not only wields an expert baton, but also a mean brush, and he has deftly managed to catch typical Cuban scenes where the dance plays such an important part.

The Cubans seem to have an inborn rhythm which is quick to stir them to undulating dance action. The inspirations may come only from the frenzied beating of a few instruments, as shown here. Most everyone knows by now the "maracha"—or shakers, which one of the dancers holds in either hand. But there are less familiar musical tools as well.

There are the "claves," two sticks of Cuban hard wood which are rattled against each other, and there is also the "tiv," a small, three-stringed guitar. But the great feature of the conga is very often the "bongo," two little drums beaten with the fingers.

As in most other dances, the rumba is done according to the social status of the dancer. The more sedate members of society seem reluctant to let themselves go—and that accounts usually for the bored expressions seen on the faces of dancers in American cities.

In Cuba, the real rumba is seen in the small public taverns or market places, where social rank doesn't count for much, and this leads to complete enjoyment of the music.

The dancer who puts his soul into a rumba is called, in Cuba, the "cumbachero," but that kind of wiggling takes plenty of space and perhaps just wouldn't do in a crowded ballroom or dance hall.

The origin of the rumba isn't quite so evident as the source of the conga.

Rumor has it that the conga was first performed by slaves imported from Africa by the Cuban traders. It first became popular in Cuba as an outdoor dance at carnival time. Someone would rap out the one-two-three-kick rhythm on the "bongo," or small drum, and soon a chain would form.

One small dancing group might gradually swell to thousands of revelers and if no bongoes were at hand a cowbell or a wooden box would serve to produce the beat.

It's a fairly simple matter to dance the conga, so if you don't know how, why not begin now?

Start counting one-two-three-four in quick time, a little faster than a march. Face your partner and on the count of one bring your right foot over your left. On the count of two, bring the left foot from the side and shift the balance to it. Repeat this for the third count, but on the count of four kick to the side with the left foot. Repeat these counts, going back in the same direction.

One variation of this basic step is to turn completely around on the counts of two and three. Another variation is for you and your partner to go in opposite directions for the count of four, but grabbing each other's right hand on the kick. Give a tug on the hand and you'll find yourself spinning in the opposite direction.

If that isn't clear, don't blame us—it's the way they do it.

The basic step of the rumba is even simpler.

Stand facing your partner. The count is one-two-three. The feet should be close together and the movement should be in the knees, keeping the hips as straight as possible.

On the count of one, bring the right knee against the left. On the count of two, the left knee against the right, and on the count of three straighten both knees, or continue with the right knee against the left.

This is a simple square step and a variation is to step to the left, bringing the right leg slowly to the left leg. Advance with the left leg, bringing up the right leg. Then to the side again until a complete square is described.

The Conga Chain—the One-Two-Three Kick Rhythm Is Supposed to Be Derived from the Shuffling Movements of Slaves With Their Ankle Chains. But the Essential Factors in a Cuban Conga Chain, Which Sometimes Will Wind Through a Whole Street, Are the Heat, the Rum and the Black-Eyed Senoritas.

On a Dancing Tour of Cuba a Familiar Sight Is the Cock Fight, a Sport Which All Enjoy. Note the Picturesque Cuban Chinaman, Who Endeavors to Be More Typical Than the Cubans Themselves.

Cancer

CANCER, "the Crab," is the fourth sign of the zodiac. In this constellation, according to ancient belief, was the famous gate through which souls descended into the bodies of mortals. The tortoise and beetle, as well as the crab, were depicted as representing Cancer, probably because their slow movements exemplified the sun's apparent motion on entering this part of the heavens.

"My beer is RHEINGOLD — the DRY beer!"

says RUSSELL PATTERSON

PHOTOGRAPHED BY ISIDORE PATTERSON

1. "When my guests ask me to put on a show with my puppets," says Russell Patterson, noted artist, "I must confess that I enjoy it as much as they do.

2. "Another thing that I enjoy as much as my guests seem to, is Rheingold—the DRY beer. That real beer flavor is a high spot of any evening."

It's beer as beer should taste!

DRY tells you WHY!

● Rheingold is light, but hearty—not bitter, not sweet. Its quality of DRYness lets the clean, clear, real beer flavor come through.

Due to the ever-increasing demand for Rheingold, your dealer may not always have enough to supply you.

But no up the quantity, we'd have to cut the quality. And that is something we'll never do. You can be sure that Rheingold will always be beer as beer should taste.

So keep asking for Rheingold. On tap and in quart and 12-oz. bottles all over town.

The Oldest Army Game

It used to be the China Theater Replacement Service. Now it's part of the Port Command. But by any name, it's the same old Army game. Put it all together and it spells: Processing.

Whether you're being inducted or separated, coming overseas or heading back to home and mommy, you've got to be processed. And processing, in Los Angeles or Calcutta, in San Francisco or Shanghai, means sweating it out, inspections, clothing checks, standing in line for everything, more inspections and more sweating it out. The Shanghai Port staging area is no exception.

Chris Ishii, staff artist, spent a few days at CTRS when they were getting the boys ready to climb aboard the Ellinge. These are his impressions.

AFTER THE ATOM, WHAT?

BY NOW, everyone has a pretty good idea of what the Atomic Age will be like. THIS WEEK, however, likes to keep a step ahead of the news, so here's a glimpse of the age after the Atomic Age. It will probably be called the Cosmic Age, and all energy will be drawn from stellar galaxies, or something.

Drawings are by Cartoonist Charles Pearson (left). He claims to be an authority on Cosmic Energy. You can believe him or not—we certainly don't.—The Cartoon Editor.

1. COMMUTERS will be changed to energy, short-waved to destination and remate-rialized. There will still be no seats.

2. COSMIC ENERGY will be applied to such games as pinball. High score produces aurora borealis. (No tilting, please!)

3. AUTOMOBILE motors will be the size of your thumb; useless maze of pipes will be installed to impress average male

4. CAFETERIAS will offer pies like Mother made. Just press buttons for height, weight, etc. of your particular mother

5. SPACEMOBILES will be troublesome until all the bugs are ironed out. At times the non-cosmic horse will come in handy
